Twice Victim of Lightning.
Culpeper, Va., July 13.—The old adage that lightning never strikes twice in the same place was disproved in last Saturday's storm when D. C. Clatterback, a prosperous farmer living near Reva, this county, who lost three fine horses in a storm about a month ago, had fourteen cattle killed by lightning. The Misses Duncan, who live on the adjoining farm to Mr. Clatterback, also lost heavily, and on Ashley Farm, near Elkwood, three fine cows were killed in the same manner.

NOTED SPEAKERS AT MONTREAT ASSEMBLY

Diversified Program at Montreat Proving of Interest to Every One.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Montreat, N. C., July 13.—The second week of the summer assembly of Southern Presbyterians at Montreat began with the sermon this morning, Rev. Walter L. Lingle, D. D., of Richmond, being the preacher, and "Brotherly Love" being the theme of his sermon. Frederick B. Wright, of Washington, was the speaker on this evening. He delivered at this time an illustrated lecture on the subject "Archaeology and the Bible." The large congregation present at both services in the auditorium gave evidence of the large interest in the number of visitors to Montreat during the past week. The service for colored people which was held this afternoon was well attended also.

During the present week Rev. J. Gray McAllister, D. D., of the Louisville Theological Seminary, will continue to conduct the Bible study each day, and the "strong hour" of devotion will be the leading feature of the afternoon. Under the direction of Miss Shirley Skillern, who has had charge of this work since the opening of the assembly, a popular entertainment will be given on Monday evening, and on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings lectures will be delivered.

Tuesday morning Professor George M. Sneath, of Western Theological Seminary, Pittsburgh, Pa., will begin a series of lectures on the "Literary and vocal interpretation of the Bible." These lectures will be continued for several days, and promise to prove to be among the most interesting and instructive features of the entire program.

The second period of the assembly begins on Thursday, July 17, and continues until Saturday, July 26. A new speaker to be introduced with the opening of the second period is Rev. Melvin Grove Kyle, D. D., of Philadelphia, who will begin on Thursday a series of seven illustrated lectures, dealing especially with excavation and discovery relative to biblical history.

Dr. Kyle is like Mr. Wright, among the most highly recommended speakers to be heard at Montreat this year. Those who have heard with such interest and instruction the illustrated lectures of Mr. Wright on historical and archaeological subjects during the past week anticipate with special pleasure the addition of the lectures of Dr. Kyle to the program.

The young people and children are much delighted on account of the arrival of Mrs. John K. Colt, of Nacoochee, Ga., and her daughter, Miss Anna Stevens, of Rome, Ga., and R. C. Lipscomb, of Spartanburg, S. C., who constitute the "faculty" of Montreat. With the addition of Miss Skillern, for the instruction of the children, and the children and young people. Many special features have been arranged in this connection which will interest not only the younger element of the population of Montreat, but the older people as well.

The prices for Irish potatoes were better the past week than they had been for two weeks. Four thousand barrels were shipped from Parkersburg market Saturday, 4,000 Thursday, and 3,000 Saturday. At Mears Wharf the barrels extended far up the hill. The Baltimore, Chesapeake and Annapolis Railway is exporting two freight steamers, in addition to the daily boats, and yet the freight cannot be handled. Hundreds of barrels are ready to be hauled from the fields when the Irish potato crop is ready.

From all over the shore are reporting seventy to seventy-five bushels to the barrel planted. Thirteen potatoes, dug from a hill at Meadowville, filled a bushel bucket. Harry Nottingham, of Eastville, has marketed 5,000 barrels. The corn which was planted between the potato rows is about eighteen inches high and a good harvest is expected.

The acreage of sweet potatoes is about as large as usual, but the prospect is extremely good for a large yield. It cost about $1 per barrel to raise and market the Irish potato crop. The price to-day was $1.50. One old farmer was heard to remark the first of the week, "The price is not very good, but we will come out all right, for even the dirt seems to have turned to potatoes."

James Ellison Guy died Saturday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James T. Edwards, of Pungoteague, aged sixty-six years. Mr. Guy married two sisters. His last wife, two sons—Sidney and George Guy, of Cape Charles—and one daughter—Mrs. Edwards—survive. Funeral services were held by Rev. L. M. ## SERVIA IS SEEKING MISSING REGALIA

Hundreds of Years Ago They Were Buried to Keep Them From Turks.

BY LA MARQUE DE FONTENAY.

THE Servians at the present time are actively engaged in prosecuting, in the territory which they have taken from the Turks during their recent war against the Sultan, a search for the missing regalia of Servia. Consisting of a superb jeweled crown and sceptre, bestowed upon Czar Michael in 1077 by Pope Gregory VII, and of various other jeweled amulets, necklaces, earrings, chalices, anointment urns, etc., of Byzantine workmanship, they were carefully buried just before or immediately after the great battle of Kosovo, in 1389, in which the last Czar of the Serbs, Lazar by name, and Sultan Murad of Turkey, both lost their lives, and in which the flower of the Serb aristocracy was wiped out of existence.

The regalia were buried to prevent their falling into the hands of the Turks, and so carefully buried that they have never been found since. The description of the jewels, even of temporary pictures of them, are still in existence, and while the place of their concealment remains a secret, they form the theme of many national epics, ancient ballads and time-honored legends.

There is every reason to believe that if not actually buried somewhere in the vicinity of the town of Kosovo, they are at any rate concealed in the former Turkish province of Kosovo. Agents of the Servian government have recently been searching in the library of the Vatican and in the National Library of France, where there are a quantity of old Servian MSS., in the hope of discovering some data which will help the discovery of the regalia from the place where they have lain concealed for nearly 600 years.

The crown which King Peter now wears is merely a temporary affair, made in Paris from the bronze of a cannon used by his ancestor, the first Karageorgevitch, a robber chieftain, in a successful rebellion against the Turks a century ago. It is a counterpart of the steel crown which King Charles, when proclaimed and crowned as King of Roumania, had made from the steel guns which the troops under his command had captured from the Turks in the battle of Plevna, in 1877.

The burial of crowns in the stormy days of the Middle Ages, to prevent their falling into the hands of the enemy, was by no means uncommon. Thus, the crown of Saint Stephen, with which Emperor Francis Joseph was crowned in 1867 as King of Hungary, has disappeared on no less than five occasions, for years together, carefully buried deep in the ground. The same fate has befallen the so-called Iron Crown of Lombardy, encircling a nail that is said to have been used in the crucifixion of the Founder of Christianity. It is the principal feature of the regalia of the Kings of Italy, while in these latter days it is believed to be concealed in the vaults of the Vatican, related how the present Earl of Kinross owes his peerage, and the fortunes of his house, to the clever way in which his ancestor, the first Earl of Kinross, had captured and concealed the regalia of Scotland in the Cromwellian regime, and until the restoration of Charles II.

Lord Saville's grand old ancestral country seat at Knole, in Kent, has been so frequently mentioned during the last two or three weeks, in connection with their sensational suit to retain the great fortune bequeathed by the late Sir John Murray Scott to Lady Saville, that it may be worth while reminding every one in the New World who has ever had occasion to use dumbbells that Knole Park is the place of their origin.

Located in the attic is a dumbbell gallery. It is unfurnished and empty, except that in the middle stands a curious wooden machine resembling a windmill used for hauling up buckets from a draw well. It is a goodly handle. A rope is wound round the middle of the roller, and at each end are four iron arms, each with a poise, the rope being attached to the end of the poise. The rope is wound round the middle of the roller, and at each end are four iron arms, each with a poise, the rope being attached to the end of the poise. The rope is wound round the middle of the roller, and at each end are four iron arms, each with a poise, the rope being attached to the end of the poise.

There was nothing that kept the muscles in such good trim as bell-ringing. That is why a dumbbell was rigged up, not only at Knole Park, but likewise in many other equally ancient country houses of the Elizabethan and Jacobean eras. By degrees everything that was designed to develop the muscles of the arms and shoulders, and to keep the gentlemen of the establishment in proper physical training, and to furnish them with the adequate amount of bodily exercise.

When some months ago a dramatic request was made from China, by a new republican government there, for the loan of a sum of money, a special Sunday, level-headed American and English people who had not merely visited the far Orient, but who had been in China and knew the country, were cynical enough to wonder the guess that the request for foreign money would be followed by a request for a foreign loan. The clergy on the other hand, who were, however, declined to entertain such skeptical views, and convinced that the Chinese government had at length come to the conclusion that Christianity was the religion of the future, and that on earth and in the hereafter, offered up prayers for the spiritual enlightenment of the Middle Kingdom.

As a result of these letters, the Chinese public mind, which had been so long in financial account the atmosphere of religious gloom will thus clear, though not with the success which they had expected. The Chinese government, public and his associates were virtuous in putting their tongue in their cheek when they asked for Christian prayers. It is best shown by the somewhat startling proclamation which the President issued at Peking by the President—a proclamation which shows that the government never had any intention of adding or even fostering Christianity.

It revives the sacrificial ceremony of Confucius in all colleges, schools and public bodies, which means that no school or college, or public body, or institutions without making the necessary religious obeisances to the altar to Confucius which is a feature of every school and college. Christians will not do this, and are consequently excluded from these educational institutions, which are the sole means to official preferment.

For several years past this rule of paying reverence to Confucius in schools, colleges, etc., had been ignored, and on the overthrow of the empire it was abolished, in order to emphasize the fact that the rule of the republic meant religious freedom. But no religious freedom can exist now that Confucianism has been re-established officially by the proclamation of President Yuan-Shih-kai.

MOSBY AT HARRISBURG.

Famous Confederate Chieftain Is Attracting Much Attention.

Harrisburg, Va., July 13.—Colonel John S. Mosby, the famous Confederate warrior, is a visitor in Harrisburg, and attracts much attention as he rides through the streets of the town in the automobile of some admiring friend.

Colonel Mosby spent several weeks at Hotel Elkton, and is now a sojourner at Massanutta Springs, four miles east of town.

The presence of the Confederate chieftain is attracting many old warriors from various parts of the country. Captain Charles H. Dear, of the Internal Revenue Service of Washington, and two at the springs this week, and paid his respects to the old veteran.

Colonel Mosby, Judge Richards, of Kentucky General John E. Roller, Judge J. G. Graham, Colonel J. E. Lee, and Mr. Martz were guests on Friday at dinner given by Mrs. Dudley Staples, formerly of Richmond, at the home of her father, J. C. Staples.

"Windor Lodge" Is Sold.

Culpeper, Va., July 13.—The fine grass farm and quaint old mansion known as "Windor Lodge," near Jefferson, this county, was sold by the owners, William and Lucian Jeffers, to W. F. Hackley, of Jefferson, who paid $18,000 cash for it. "Windor Lodge" was first established over 100 years ago by Alexander Jeffers, a wealthy retired merchant of Fredericksburg, who laid out acres of gardens and imported many rare shrubs and flowers.

He located them, and after it passed out of the hands of the Jeffers family, it was owned in turn by the Porters and their descendants. Twenty-five years ago, when workmen were making some repairs in the old mansion, a secret closet in one of the thick walls was discovered, in which was a box with some pieces of jewelry and three letters, written many generations ago.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Winchester, Va., July 13.—A belated honeymoon afout is the unique scheme which has been concocted by Mr. and Mrs. P. Lewis Ross and Mr. Mrs. J. Russell Klein, all of whom were married recently in Fort Wayne, Ind., that they decided it was the only thing left to complete their happiness. A day or two ago the brides and grooms were equipped for long-distance walking, left on a 1,200-mile jaunt to Winchester, where they will spend several weeks with relatives. Upon arriving at Cincinnati the pedestrians will follow a turnpike, which will bring them into the heart of the business section of this city. If their trip is made without mishap, they will next start from Fort Wayne on a walking journey to the Panama Exposition.
